Written by Julie Johnston

The day too short, the night too long,
the rain was heavy, the wind too strong.
This walk of life you could no longer hold,
you needed warmth, it felt too cold.
So much not done and so much unsaid,
this path too hard for you to tread.
No strength to love to work, laugh or play,
you could not stay yet one more day.
My baby sister now you are gone.. no longer can I say
How are you Babe? How was your day?
Instead I stand and lift my eyes high,
I watch the stars and pray you safe in the sky.
Unconditional love to you with every being of me
Rest easy hun and when we meet again you will see.
My sis, my girl we will never really be apart
because I will always hold you close to my heart.

“Before You Go” performed by Josh McKellar

POEM

Guardian Angel

When I'm gone, please don't cry.
Release your tears now so I'll have wings to fly.
Tell the weeping willow to no longer weep
for there is no need.

Tell the sky to open its clouds,
For my soul is ready to be free.
Free from mind, body and heart
For these things have all grown apart.
If a tear does fall and you feel weird
Have no fear because my soul is near.
The clouds have opened and my soul is ready to leave.
At night wish upon a star with a silent prayer
And my soul will find your heart.
